

Worldwide Work grows in '80, receives record volume of mail

PASADENA — The Work's Mail Processing Center received the highest volume of mail in six years in 1980, according to Richard Rice, the center's director. About 2.2 million pieces of mail were received last year, he said.

"With God's Work back on course and brethren understanding their role in the Church, total support for God's apostle has been apparent from the mail," reported Mr. Rice. "Members and co-workers deeply appreciate Mr. [Herbert W.] Armstrong's seemingly tireless efforts."

The number of Plain Truth cards returned — 165,000 — showed a 453 percent increase over 1979. The November semiannual letter brought in the second highest response since 1970 for such a letter.

Telephone responses also increased in 1980. About 170,000 calls were received, 22 percent more than the previous year. Mr. Armstrong's newspaper advertisements, especially The Wall Street Journal series, brought many phone calls, noted Mr. Rice.

The year ended on a positive note for God's Work in Australia and Asia. Income for December was up 32.2 percent, bringing the year-to-date increase to 27.5 percent, according to Ministerial Services. During the year more than 300,000 booklets and articles were mailed to Australian and Asian readers. The 6,000 letters received last month brought the count for 1980 to nearly 189,000, a 9.5 percent increase over 1979.

The regional office in San Juan, Puerto Rico, sent in statistics compiled from all areas served. Incoming mail for the third quarter (July, August and September) increased 138 percent over the same period in 1979. Mail containing contributions was up 83 percent over 1979.

Mail sent directly to the International Mail Center in Pasadena increased 114 percent.

Income for the Caribbean area in the third quarter increased slightly — about 5 percent over the 1979 third quarter. Holy day figures for 1980 showed a 9 percent increase in (See GROWTH, page 8)

Spanish ministers gather in 'realization of dream'

PASADENA — "For the first time in the Philadelphia era of God's Church the entire Spanish ministry is together in one place," said Leon Walker, director of the Spanish Department.

The ministers are here for the seventh session of the Ministerial Refreshing Program, which runs from Jan. 12 to Jan. 29.

Coming to Pasadena is the "realization of a dream," said Luis E. Chavez, pastor of the Bahia Blanca and Ezeiza, Argentina, churches.

The trip enabled them to meet the Spanish Department office staff, many of whom they have communicated with by letter or phone for years.

Each session is translated into English by Reg Killingley, a ministerial trainee who works in the Spanish Department.

The sessions are quite an education, said Mr. Walker, as some men don't have formal Ambassador College training.

Filidor Illesca, pastor of the Temuco, Chile, church, told The Worldwide News that he looks to Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong as the "cerebrum of the Work." God uses Mr. Armstrong to direct the rest of the body, he said.

Mr. Illesca started one of the most successful cardholder programs in the world, according to Keith Speaks, promotional director for La Pura Verdad (Spanish Plain Truth).

Cards placed in the largest post office in Chile yielded more than 6,000 new subscriptions to the PT, Mr. Speaks said.

Herbert Cisneros, pastor of the San Salvador, El Salvador, church, left that violence-racked country to attend the program. He is responsible for all of Central America.

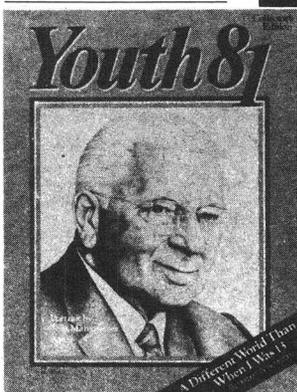

No Church members have been hurt in the fighting, he said, but he has anointed several for tension-related problems. Terrorists often kidnap teenage boys and take them to their camps. Car theft is prevalent, and those disobeying calls for general strikes are sometimes gunned down on the way to work, he said.

Wilfredo Saenz pastors the Lima, Peru, church and three outlying Bible studies. Some of the brethren in Huaraz speak Quechua, an Indian language spoken in Peru and elsewhere in South America, but little or no Spanish.

Mr. Saenz gives a shortened version of his sermon in Quechua and then a longer version in Spanish. Details are filled in by the brethren later, he said.

PT cardholders 'very successful'

Boyd Leeson, U.S. Plain Truth circulation manager, talked with The Worldwide News about the new PT cardholder program. The following is excerpted from that interview.

What is the cardholder program?

The cardholder itself is a small cardboard plaque that holds a number of postage-paid cards offering free subscriptions to The Plain Truth magazine. Volunteers from church areas put the placards up in various locations in their community.

How successful is the program?

Very successful. More than 16,500 new subscribers have joined our mailing list since May, 1980.

Can members find out how successful their individual efforts are? Yes. Each pastor has a computer printout we send him detailing this information. It is updated monthly.

Is there large public response? Yes, but Church members should not expect a huge number — like 50 percent — to be mailed in. We have an excellent response now — approximately 5 to 10 percent. People don't pick up the cards as fast as they do the newsstand editions of The Plain Truth, but the program is just as effective.

Are the cardholders ever vandalized?

Yes, but this is not alarming. Many other magazine cardholders offering Newsweek and other magazines are vandalized or removed. We recommend that the cardholders be replaced, but only stocked with five to 10 cards at a time.

How are the locations obtained for the cardholders?

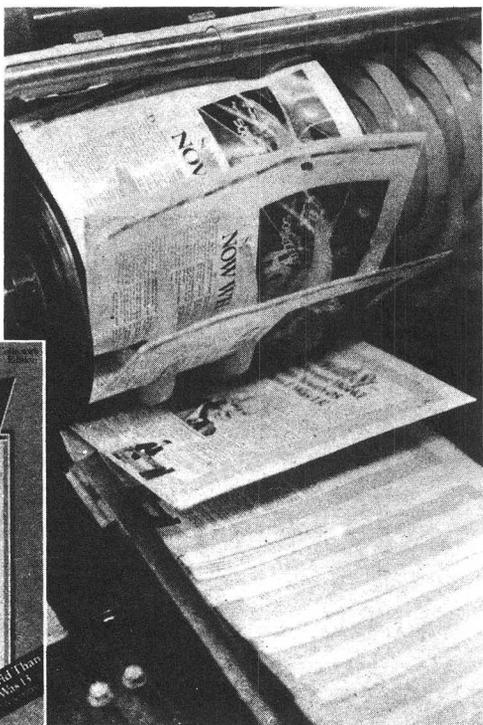

We encourage volunteer members to talk with the store managers directly, emphasizing the cardholder as a positive service for their customers. If a PT newsstand is removed for any reason, we also encourage it to be replaced with a cardholder.

Will members place cardholders in every store they approach? Not usually, but we find there is a good percentage rate. Often our volunteers find they place cardholders in places they never thought they could. We encourage them to try every possibility.

Do members enjoy working with (See CARDHOLDERS, page 8)

Jan. 20: President Reagan in, hostages out

PASADENA — "It's over: The great Satan bows to all our conditions." So trumpeted Tehran's Kayhan newspaper following the announcement of a U.S.-Iranian agreement to end the 14-month-old hostage crisis.

"Down with America, down with Reagan," shouted Iran's revolutionary guards — in English — as the two Algerian jets carrying the 52 American hostages prepared to depart for freedom.

Thus, Iranian authorities kept up the vitriol to the very end. But in the end, with Jan. 20 looming, they felt they had to get whatever they could out of the Carter administration. They had no desire to deal with a man who bluntly called them barbarians — and who appropriately referred to the hostages as "prisoners of war."

Nevertheless their hatred of America and Mr. Carter was so great that the Iranian revolutionaries purposely delayed the hostages' release until 35 minutes after Mr. Reagan was sworn into office. They were determined to deprive Mr. Carter of any final taste of victory in the hostage crisis.

Squalid negotiations

We might not know for some time, perhaps, the real price paid for the return of the hostages.

The outgoing Carter administration was adamant in insisting that not 1 cent of taxpayers' money would be involved in the initial $8 billion transfer; that all that was being returned was Iran's assets, which had been frozen shortly after the U.S. Embassy was stormed; that Iran would have to earmark $5 billion to pay off bank loans and future litigations.

This is probably not the whole story. The hostages, for example, will not be able to sue Iran for damages as a result of their 14-month ordeal. Any such suits would instead be covered by the U.S. Treasury.

New Republic magazine (Jan. 3 to 10 issue) bluntly called the negotiations "squalid" and said they had been "conducted as if the Iranians were the aggrieved party."

"Ronald Reagan has said, in an offhand and casual way about the captivity of Americans in Tehran, what Jimmy Carter should have said as a deliberate and calculated statement of U.S. policy 14 months ago, 'We will not pay ransom to secure their release.'"

"Carter might then have added that, unless the hostages were released and released quickly, the cost to Iran would be unpredictable and incalculable.

"Jimmy Carter was probably incapable of such an utterance . . .

"The mullahs took Jimmy Carter's measure early on and they took it accurately. When they play cards, they look not at the cards but at the faces of their opponents . . . His face told them that they'd run no risk and incur no cost . . .

"President Carter's words told them, too, quite specifically, that we would abjure a use of force. And when, months later, he resorted not to punitive but simply to minimal force aimed at extricating our hostages, he did so halfheartedly, timidly, as if to doom the act in advance, which it did."

The reverberations of the hostage crisis and the deal that ended it will be around for a long time.

America's new President — the nation's 40th — hopes that he will too. Mr. Reagan, in his inaugural address, pledged his administration's efforts to get the country moving again, to achieve an "era of national renewal."

Certainly, one cannot help but be impressed by President Reagan's determination. He is surrounded by a coterie of wise advisers, successful men, all of them. The new President and his "millionaires' kitchen cabiling the Namibian question to the U.N. Security Council at this time.

Talks over the future of the last colonial territory in Africa collapsed in mid-January. If the Carter administration had been returned to power, there would right now be cries in the U.N. for sanctions against South Africa, blaming it for the collapse of the negotiations.

Now, however, a more pragmatic U.S. foreign policy, unclouded by unachievable ideals, one based on U.S. and Western interests, may be vindicated by their leaders that the federal government is abandoning them. (Mr. Reagan instead wants to enlist the aid of industry in fighting unemployment and other economic ills.)

Trouble areas are legion. Latin America awaits the Reagan administration's response toward the internal war in El Salvador. The upward spiral of OPEC oil prices would seem beyond Mr. Reagan's influence to control.

Overseas, the Soviets will provide one test after another. At the moment, Moscow is solidly behind Libya's merger with Chad — bringing the radical Arab regime right up to the Sudanese border, with the ability to destabilize much of the mineral-rich sub-Saharan region.

On the other hand, direct Soviet-U.S. ties are likely to improve. The Soviets respect power. At a recent party at the Soviet Embassy in Washington, former President Richard M. Nixon told Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin he felt that "rather than this being a period with a danger of war, it will be the opposite."

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger chimed in: "The Soviets want a predictable administration. And in a curious way, I think they want one that puts limits on them. Their system is not capable of operating under the principle of self-restraint."

Only U.S. power can limit the Soviet appetite. Mr. Reagan understands this cardinal fact.

net," have, in turn, selected cabinet officials who themselves have been successful both in industry and government service.

Mr. Reagan understands the power of the presidency, and with it the dignity that the office of the President should project.

Impact already felt

The projection of power with style has already had two results.

First of all, of course, is the Iranian situation. The mere threat of dealing with Tehran in harsher terms was enough to force the ayatollah to rush the situation to a conclusion.

Secondly, in a little-reported news development, the Communist Third World bloc has deferred tak-

Pretoria gambled that this would be the case. So far it's winning.

Troubles ahead

Perhaps no administration in U.S. history will be challenged at home and abroad as the new one. At home, crime is exploding in America's big cities. Racial violence, unleashed in Miami in 1980, threatens to boil over in many places, especially if minority groups are con-

Just one more thing

By Dexter H. Faulkner

Most of us are living "in the fast lane," as the song goes. Our days fit by, as weeks dissolve into months, and before we know it, we are beginning a new year.

It's a time when people around the world look back on the accomplishments of the past and set goals for the future. Self examination and goal setting are not limited to this time, but perhaps we can be motivated to slow down and take a long look at our priorities.

A friend of mine did this by following a suggestion she read to fill one 8½-by-11-inch page with goals she wished to accomplish in her lifetime. The page had to be completely covered, with no margins left blank.

After this, she was instructed to cross out, one by one, the goals of lesser importance, until the major goal of her life was left. She found that even more than claiming for herself a position in God's Kingdom was her desire that her children be there.

To her chagrin, the next question was, "What percentage of your time is allotted to accomplishing that major goal?"

Even though your top goal might not be the same as hers, I'm sure the success of your children would rank right at the top of your list. It does on mine. But what does success mean to you?

In some of Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong's recent Wall Street Journal ads he has encouraged readers to write for his booklet The Seven Laws of Success. When was the last time you read this fantastic little booklet? Reviewing this book myself recently drove home the point that success by the world's standards has little import compared to the success of qualifying for the Kingdom of God.

After fulfilling our commission as part of this Church, to support Mr. Armstrong as he witnesses to the world, our No. 1 priority should be to qualify, along with our families, for a position in God's Kingdom. We need to work at it daily, hourly, sometimes moment by moment. And Mr. Armstrong's book gives us the steps we need to take to be successes by God's standards.

In one of the most revealing passages in the New Testament, Christ gave us a biblical formula for success: "Whoever wants to become great among you must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be your slave — just as the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give his life as a ransom for many" (Matthew 20:26-28, New International Version).

Ours has been called the "me-generation," a time when people have learned to look to their own interest with little concern about others. We emphasize self-fulfillment, self-actualization, self-satisfaction, self-realization, self-discipline, giving, caring, compassion.

From God's perspective, everyone can be successful. Hebrews 11 gives a list of people God considered successful. Some were rich; others were poor. Many were famous, but a large number were unknown. Some were healthy; others were sick. Some lived to an advanced age, while many died early and sometimes violently.

These people were all men and women of faith whose success was measured by God's standards. Each was obedient to God, and each had the attitude of a servant.

Some people, it seems, have the extra drive, discipline, enthusiasm, strength, ability and/or determination that enables them to attain success in accordance with the world's standards. Some have special education and opportunities that enable them to get ahead. If you are like this, thank God. Humbly recognize that it is He who has given you the interests, capabilities, motivation and experiences that enabled you to be successful.

Our responsibility as Christians is to serve diligently, obediently and to the best of our capabilities — whether or not we obtain success by human standards.

The Bible never implies that it is wrong to achieve economic success, or to be well-known in our communities. But it is wrong to make these worldly marks of success our prime goal in life. It is wrong to manipulate or hurt others in our desire to get ahead. It is wrong to justify a lust for power and prestige. The Christian who is successful seeks to encourage, help and build up others. He or she is diligent in work, obedient to God, striving daily to qualify to enter the Kingdom of God.

This formula for success is completely at odds with the values of our society. It goes against the teaching of self-help books. Nevertheless, it is the basis of real and lasting success in God's eyes, the only real success.

Look at the first law of success again. Once we have learned the true meaning of success, then we have found the only right goal.

Mr. Armstrong, in his January Good News Personal, has designated 1981 the "year of the family." In order to make this a meaningful, successful year for every member of the family — husband/wife, parent/child, or begotten members of the Family of God, now is the time to think about our priorities — maybe even to set new commitments that may last us throughout eternity.

Satan's deception

Thank you for the newest article in the W/N about Satan deceiving any of us. I hope that won't ever happen, but only God can help us not to be deceived — being close to God.

Valuable services

My thanks to The Worldwide News and Mr. Armstrong for the beautiful tribute given in appreciation for the valuable services to the Church and devotion in friendship of Mr. Stanley Rader. Profitable servant

From your article on Mr. Rader I've learned what it really means to be a profitable servant. To do much more than is required is pleasing to God. I've put the practice to work where I'm employed some time ago. I feel great because it's not going unnoticed by our Father.

News analyses

I want to commend you on the W/N staff for the excellent work you have been doing. I especially want to point out the news analyses Gene Hogberg has been doing. "Political Shifts . . ." in the Nov. 24 W/N was especially good in how it gave attention to the election of Michael Foot to the Labour Party leadership and the implications of that election. The Aug. 11 W/N article on "Iraq's Saddam Hussein . . ." is one I will always consider semiprophetic since six weeks later Iraq invaded Iran.

I would just like to thank you for the article in the Nov. 24, 1980, issue on the landscape crew. Reminder needed

So often I forget to pray for those of you at Pasadena who relentlessly serve the Church; by answering important questions, praying for healing and generally organizing, printing and distribution of booklets, magazines, etc. Thank you for the reminder that you also need our prayers, that God only can fight Satan for us.

WITH STANLEY R. RADER

The following is a Dec. 29 telephone interview between Church treasurer Stanley R. Rader in Tucson and Gene Burns of radio station WKIS in Orlando, Fla.

[We have with us today Mr. Stanley R. Rader, treasurer of the Worldwide Church of God and author of the book, Against the Gates of Hell, published by Everest House. And it's the story of an unprecedented assault on the Worldwide Church of God in California by the California attorney general.

You may recall, about a year ago, I guess it was, this was the subject of a 60 Minutes piece and pitched battles between Mr. Rader and the interviewer on that program. We're going to talk with Mr. Rader about where that action is at the moment and reflect on this very important case.

And I would say this is probably the most important case in church-state relations in the last 50 years in the United States, perhaps even longer than that. And it's important to get the matters of law, the impact on the First Amendment, fixed in our minds in this particular case. Mr. Rader, how are you today?

I'm just fine.

Are there any legal actions now pending against you on the part of the state of California?

No, they have dismissed all of their complaints, which, of course, were all of the civil nature. And we in turn have dismissed in the state court all of our complaints which were in the nature of counter claims.

And the only thing that we have to decide in the next 60 days is whether or not we will pursue our federal rights, which flow from the Civil Rights Act. And under that act we would have a right to redress for all the wrongs that were done to us, to all of those state officials who acted outside the law.

Have you been able to determine just how many people were involved in pressuring the state attorney general in bringing the action in the first place?

Well, actually there were very few people involved who had anything to do with the actual allegations, which were false, of course, but nonetheless which were made against the Church and its officials.

These were six former members. And there were two married couples so you only have really three people. And they were people who were more or less nominal members and nominal plaintiffs.

They had no firsthand contact with the organization, which would have put them into a position of having what some people would call "inside" knowledge. And they based all of their allegations on what lawyers call information and belief, but what you and I would call hearsay and gossip.

All the other people involved were people who were working for the government; they were bureaucrats. Actually a little-known part of the attorney general's office is constituted as the charitable trust division, which came into existence about 12, 13 years ago.

And this small part of the attorney general's office had the responsibility under an act that was passed back in 1967 to, shall we say, monitor and supervise to the extent necessary, charities such as the YMCA and the United Fund and all the various kinds of charities that there might be in the state of California. But churches were specifically taken out of that particular statute.

And lo and behold, in the aftermath of the Jonestown tragedy in Guyana in November of 1978, about two years ago, these bureaucrats seemed to think that there was a green light given to them to exercise dominion and control over churches and that's what brought this whole lawsuit about. Those are the people whom we have to consider when we think of our civil rights.

Despite the fact that churches had been specifically written out of the law?

That's correct. But you must remember, Jonestown was a hideous thing. It was brought to the consciousness of the entirety of the world.

And [Jim] Jones was from California and had a very interesting background, because he was the darling of the politicians out here. He worked hand in hand with many of them in the San Francisco Bay area, worked very closely with [Jimmy] Carter in '76 during his drive for the presidency and helped turn out the vote for them.

And therefore, when this tragedy hit, there was a lot of clamor, not necessarily justified, but nonetheless, it was a very strong argument that maybe the state of California in its official aspects did not do enough to prevent the Jonestown tragedy.

I don't think they could have prevented these people, in a free society that we have, from leaving the country and going to Guyana. And once they were there, of course, the U.S. didn't have any jurisdiction over them.

But nonetheless, when the government is attacked — we learned this in Watergate and we found out from "Billygate" and the like — the first thing the people do when they are attacked is they lie.

And the second thing they do is they try to cover up. And the third thing they do, if they have a chance, is to look around for a target of opportunity. And we turned out to be that target of opportunity.

So you think that on balance the state of California's attorney general moved against you as an overreaction to the suggestion that California had not moved against...?

Very clearly. And unfortunately it came at a time when the attorney general was going out of office, and for two years prior to that time he'd been running around the state of California trying to become governor. And therefore, you know the adage, when the boss is away the mice will play, and these bureaucrats were playing.

Then the lawsuit came five or six days later, that the attorney general left office, his name having been involved in the case. Of course, a new attorney general came into power, and by the time his honeymoon period was over, and he found out where the key to his office was, and who worked for him, the state had painted itself into a corner.

Did the state move against you on its own recognizance, or did it move in the name of the six dissidents?

Well, from a technical standpoint, it's a very interesting matter. But I hope it doesn't bore your audience. There is a rather abstruse section of the California administrative code, which provides that under certain circumstances, individuals from the public can get leave to sue in the name of the state. And that's what these six people did.

"As it turned out they had a very strong adversary in Mr. Herbert Armstrong, a man who has led this Church through all kinds of problems, thick and thin, and God put him there, and God has kept him there, and this is one of the battles ... God intended him to fight."

dubbed immediately the "deceiver." And we had our lines of credit, which had been very carefully nurtured after being established, we had them broken, which meant we had to deal on a cash-and-carry basis, which threw a great burden upon the institution. And of course, maybe most important, our reputation, our name, has been injured in some quarters.

By the same token, since we won the matter and came to the attention of a greater number of people in the public, those who managed to keep an open mind and were not thrown, shall we say, totally away from the truth by the big lie, those people are more cognizant of what we are, what we are doing, what we say, why we do it, why we say it, who our members are. And as a consequence now, the Church is enjoying growth. So it was somewhat of a mixed blessing.

You are a lawyer, an educated man, you are an accountant among other things, you have a long history with the Church and its college, Ambassador College, so you are, let us say, sophisticated. Were you, even you, shocked at the awesome power the state brought to bear and that you were absolutely powerless to do anything about?

It's very difficult to really state how stunned and shocked I was. Basically I am an educated person, I thought I was a sophisticated lawyer, that meant someone who was fort to Harvard, but for that combination of circumstances, as well as our own spiritual resources, which, of course, come from God, our financial resources, which He blesses us with, our physical resources and our human resources, all of which were marshaled under Mr. Herbert Armstrong's strong leadership, but for that combination of circumstances, the state and a handful of people would have been able to have their way. That meant they would have bent this Church to its will, changed its structure from that of hierarchical, which is under the government of God, into something else called a congregationalist church.

They would have thrown out the modern leader of the Church for over 50 years, Mr. Herbert Armstrong. And if they didn't succeed in doing those things, they would have destroyed the Church and would not strong adversary in Mr. Herbert Armstrong, a man who has led this Church through all kinds of problems, thick and thin, and God put him there, and God has kept him there, and this is one of the battles I guess, which God intended him to fight.

But it is a little disturbing to me that no precedent was set in the other direction either. In other words, I would have liked to have seen the U.S. Supreme Court say categorically and unequivocally that you have transgressed on the First Amendment and make it quite clear that the next time some attorney general's office selects a target of opportunity like the Worldwide Church of God, they can see the Worldwide Church of God, the California attorney general for their guidance. Does that disturb you at all?

Well, actually, my book is incomplete in one major respect. You see, I sent the book to the publishers in February of 1980. But in June of 1980, the state legislature began to move. And a bill was introduced by a state senator by the name of Nicholas Petris of Oakland, Calif., and that bill was designed to strip the attorney general of the state of California of any powers that he asserted under California law that would have given him this right and this duty to take over churches, exercise supervision, control over them and actually to claim that all church property belonged to the state.

And during the months of June, July and August, that bill went through the California legislature, came out and is now referred to commonly as Senate Bill 1493.

And it was overwhelmingly passed by both houses of the California legislature by a vote, for example, in the senate of 52 to 1, and by a 52 to 12 vote in the assembly. And then it was signed into law on Sept. 30 by Gov. [Edmund] Brown [Jr.].

And it's that bill really that pretty much forced the attorney general's hand. It was a very clear mandate of the legislature for all people to realize that there is a First Amendment in the Constitution of the United States, that it was made applicable to the states by reason of the Fourteenth Amendment, and that churches are not supposed to be trampled upon by ambitious politicians, ambitious states, ambitious bureaucrats and the like.

So really a precedent has been set. Now in our country, we have too many people, I'm afraid, that think the only time that we can have a law of the land properly decreed is when the Supreme Court gives us that, shall we say, mandate. And those are nine people who are appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate.

In this case the democratic process really worked, we had a California legislature representing all the people of the state of California. They aired the question very thoroughly, meaning all the issues were very well aired, ventilated. And everybody had an opportunity to be heard.

It was a very highly volatile issue. It was very much on the minds of all the radio stations, television stations, newspapers. They all wrote or uttered their own editorials. And by the time they all got through, everybody had had a piece of the argument. And the state legislature acted, it acted to protect all the churches, all of whom, by the way also were involved in that battle in the state legislature. And all the constitutional lawyers and all the

As it turned out they had a very

"In the aftermath of this lawsuit and its final outcome, many, many seminars are being conducted all over the United States. Many symposia are also being organized."

Can you envision a similar attack being made, let us say, on the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Los Angeles? In other words, were you attacked as this so-called target of opportunity because you were not a mainline church?

That's exactly right. In other words, we were attacked for a combination of reasons. One, we were not mainline, which meant that we were unorthodox, but not "off the wall." That was very important because we are enough like the other mainline churches so that a precedent against us would have been an important one for the state.

We looked like we were small enough to be handled easily, large enough so that the precedent would be good. And they had heard, and of course, it was false, that we were a hopelessly divided church led by an old man living in the desert. And they built a Howard Hughes syndrome around him in their complaint.

As it turned out they had a very quite well-tuned into the way the entire judicial process works and the way the government works.

I was a law professor at the University of Southern California. I am a person who is very well informed and aside from [former U.S. Secretary of State] Henry Kissinger and Mr. [Herbert W.] Armstrong, no one in the world has traveled more.

So, none of this was something that I anticipated, it's not anything that any person, who would be able to say he had the same kind of experience I have had, would have been able to contemplate. And what would have shocked me the most was the way the judicial system and the entire process could be subverted or perverted by a handful of people.

And but for an enlightened legislature and the massive support as friends of the court that we received from all the major and minor denominations of this country, as well as the civil libertarians and the constitutional lawyers from Stan-civil libertarian groups came in.

And the result was that the governor of the state and the legislature of the state combined, told everybody that the law of the state of California must be consistent with the law of the land, notwithstanding anybody's ideas to the contrary.

So we're hoping that that will serve as a precedent, although, of course, all legislatures are comprised of men and the next legislature could turn around and change the law, but we would hope that wouldn't happen.

Have you had inquiries from people in other states who fear they have similar legislation that they need to perfect in attempting to profit from your experience?

Absolutely. As an outgrowth or, shall we say, in the aftermath of this lawsuit and its final outcome, many, many seminars are being conducted all over the United States. Many symposia are also being organized.

"These bureaucrats seemed to think that there was a green light given to them to exercise dominion and control over churches, and that's what brought this whole lawsuit about."

I and others who have had to be in the vanguard of this effort are being asked to participate, and various other groups are being formed. There is a very important one in California, which is called the First Freedom Committee, all of which is designed to protect the religious freedom of all people regardless of what their particular persuasion might be.

And actually I think that everyone has recognized now that the issue that came to the fore in California was even greater than that of religious freedom, because all of the other rights are involved; freedom of speech, freedom of press and freedom of association. They are all wrapped up together in this particular case. And of course, they are all wrapped up as well in the First Amendment.

Well, also there's the philosophical matter that for those people who do not believe that the government has power, this is certainly a vivid example of just exactly what kind of awesome power the government can muster if it chooses.

Well, yes. In other words, they act first, and they ask questions later. A good example of that, for example, is what occurred really in Washington in January of 1979 when some shoot-first, ask-questions-later types from the Congress barged in on then Attorney General Griffin Bell, and that fine, courtly, Southern gentleman, kind of leaned back in his chair when they demanded an immediate federal investigation of so-called cults be mounted by his Department of Justice.

And he said, Gentlemen, I don't know what a cult is. But I'm a Baptist, he said, and I guess that makes me a cultist. Well, that ended this so-called federal investigation of cults.

But you can imagine what the result would have been if a different sort of man had been in the chair of the attorney general. We might have had some kind of witch-hunt going on.

And spent millions of dollars needlessly.

Exactly. Everyone, of course, would have forgotten that today's cult — whatever that word means — can be tomorrow's orthodoxy.

Let me ask you to characterize in as few words as you think it takes, and that's not the foreclosures obviously discussing it in detail, but I'm interested in your first reaction.

I know that you are personally irritated by the 60 Minutes treatment of this story. And I'm curious to know whether you think they had a vicious intent, whether they were sloppy in their journalism, whether they set out to set you up. How would you characterize the way they handled this story?

Well, it was a very interesting episode in this entire matter. The 60 Minutes [producers] had wanted to do a story about the Worldwide Church of God for some time, even before the lawsuit, and I had repeatedly refused them access to me and others in our organization who were higher than I and did not want to be involved.

And when this lawsuit broke, the 60 Minutes producers again asked if I might be willing to be interviewed and the like and I said no. Then Mike Wallace himself came out personally and begged me, literally, to give him an opportunity to get involved in what he considered was a major constitutional battle.

I said, Mike, if that is your promise, if you will air the constitutional issue, you'll be doing us a great service, not only our Church and me and Mr. Armstrong, but all the other people, regardless of their religious persuasion.

I said, I don't mind you treating the other issue as well, which is whether or not the charges made by the state are true or false, that is something that you have a right to make inquiry about.

My major concern therefore, concerning 60 Minutes narrows down to only two things. One, Wallace totally broke his promise to me to air the constitutional issue. And if he had done so, he would have saved me a lot of time. Because when he had failed to do so and finally aired his program, then I had to step up my work and go around the country as a one-man Paul Revere sounding the alarm and also as a one-man truth squad.

And I did it quite effectively, and you see what the result was. But he renege on the promise.

The only other thing that I was annoyed about with Wallace was that he had the arrogance to play in my presence, and then ultimately for the public, but in my presence was enough, a surreptitiously, illegally, unlawfully obtained tape recording of a conversation between Mr. Armstrong, Christ's apostle, and a minister of the Worldwide Church of God.

And even though I told him that that was a tape that had been illegally acquired, and since that time, by way of deposition, we have it all nailed down, we know who recorded it, when they recorded it, when they gave it to Wallace and the like.

And I made it very plain to Wallace and I made it plain in my book, that I wasn't concerned about the substance of the tape, the substance of the tape had been offered by me and our lawyers as affirmative positive evidence as early as Jan. 9 in the state court.

But it was the arrogance that a journalist, a supposed respected member of the fourth estate, would air a surreptitiously acquired tape, which, by the way, was in direct contravention of a penal code section of the California law. And we tried to get the district attorney to move against Wallace. Mr. Armstrong filed an affidavit and filed a complaint, but, of course, nothing was ever done about it.

That's my only complaint. My complaint about investigative, shall we say, reporting in general, is the same as that of the late Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. And he just simply said that it was the worst kind of reporting, totally one-sided, totally unreliable, totally sensational in its efforts, and only designed to arouse the worst in the public.

And they generally go in with a particular bias. In other words, they went in and they decided that they were going to try to prove on their program that the Worldwide Church of God was comprised of bad people.

Now as it turns out, I'm the only example, along with Mr. Armstrong and the Church, the only group that have really made Mike Wallace and his people eat their words. They've had to repeatedly give updates on the story, each time correcting the impression that they left, not because of just some more evidence coming in, but because whatever they had suggested did not come to pass.

And they tried to label us as bad guys wearing black hats. It didn't work. So on balance I would say that the 60 Minutes program did not do the Work of the living God any damage. It probably helped us in the long run.

Have they ever come back to you to seek permission to do a follow-up now that the case is . . . ?

No, but they have done follow-ups. They announced that the suit had been dropped. That was one follow-up, and before that they announced that the Petris bill had passed. Before that they announced that the criminal investigation of me by the Internal Revenue Service had ended, and so on and so forth.

So they had to keep giving the public further updates, and they also were kind enough each time they ran their major 20-minute program, they did that twice, they were kind enough to read letters that had come in from the public.

And the ones in our favor seemed to outstrip those against us by approximately 4 to 1 just by measuring their own use of the letters,

"The First Amendment . . . was made applicable to the states by reason of the Fourteenth Amendment, and . . . churches are not supposed to be trampled upon by . . . ambitious bureaucrats and the like."

because they would show four good ones against one bad one.

You've not had a further conversation with Wallace about the story?

No, but what I'd like to do with Wallace and what I am tempted to do is to run a full-page ad in the New York Times challenging Wallace to go 20 minutes live with me like you're doing right now. And if he wants to go 40 minutes, I'll let him bring Morley [Safer]. And if he wants to go 60 minutes, he can bring everybody from CBS. All I want to do is go on live with him. That would be kind of fun and, of course, he wouldn't do it.

Was there any time in the midst of any of this when you said you were going to lose this battle, this is tough, I don't think we're going to make it?

No, no, I never did. That comes primarily because of our faith. Mr. Armstrong and I, I can tell you, never for a moment doubted what the outcome would be. He described the battle right from the beginning very accurately, very simply, he got rid of all of the issues that were really red herrings.

He said the very first week of the lawsuit, this is simply a question of who will rule God's Church, Christ or Caesar? Very simple. That was the bottom line.

And he knew that if this were God's Church the answer had to be exactly as I used in the title of my book, Against the Gates of Hell, because when those keys were given to Peter he was promised that he and the Church would prevail even against the gates of hell? "I's stated negatively, of course, it says even the gates of hell will not prevail against you. Which, in essence, means that you'll win the battle over death itself.

So how can we be fearful of winning a battle against some men who happened to be wearing the trappings of the state, which is simply a secular power? Impossible. Impossible to doubt it for a moment.

One final question, which takes us 180 degrees, but I know you've just returned from the Middle East and I know you've met with [President] Anwar Sadat [of Egypt] among others. Do we have reason for optimism, do you suspect, or should we be pessimistic about the near term future of the Middle East?

Have you been watching The Wall Street Journal at all lately?

Yes. Mr. Armstrong every Monday for the last two and a half months, three months, has been writing full-page ads that have been appearing around the country, but every Mon-

And that man has been cut off from God for some 6,000 years, while he's been trying to build his own society using his own laws, his own governments, his own ways, which are not God's ways.

And but for the fact that Christ promised to return and to return as a King and a High Priest, meaning to rule and to establish a government of God within a Kingdom of God based upon the laws of God, but for that, no remnant would be saved.

So we know what the final outcome is. We know that although man can destroy itself, mankind can destroy itself today — finally they've worked hard enough in the laboratories to make that possible, and we know that there are men with enough malice who would rather blow up the world than make it a better place under God's laws — nonetheless, Christ will return.

Therefore it is a message of hope. And as Mr. Armstrong has said repeatedly throughout the world wherever he goes, this is mankind's hope, this is mankind's heritage.

So it is a religious answer. It's a message of hope for everyone. In the meantime, Mr. Armstrong continues vigorously, as do we who are behind him in his efforts, we do what we can to point the way toward world peace.

That's what President Sadat has done in the Middle East, and Mr. Armstrong just made, in the name of the Church, the first $1 million contribution to what is a major vision of President Sadat, that is, to establish at the foot of Mt. Sinai an interdenominational center.

He's going to build a synagogue, a church and a mosque right there at the foot of Mt. Sinai. It's a $70 million project. Mr. Armstrong was the first one to give him his support. That is pointing the way toward world peace.

And Mr. Armstrong also sums that up very simply. He says there are two ways of life, the get way and the give way. And unless you follow the principle of giving, you're going to have more conflict, more strife, more competition, more frustration, more envy, jealousy and hate, all of which ultimately leads to the greatest type of conflict of all, which is war.

Mr. Rader, we appreciate your taking the time to be with us. It's an extraordinary story. It's the kind of story you wouldn't believe if you hadn't lived through it, I guess.

Well, I thank you very much for calling me, it was fun talking with you.

NEWS OF PEOPLE, PLACES & EVENTS IN THE WORLDWIDE CHURCH OF GOD

UPDATE

PASADENA — Traveling evangelist Gerald Waterhouse spoke to Dutch-speaking brethren at a combined Bible study Dec. 26. Rod Matthews of the International Office of Ministerial Services noted that most of those present had never heard Mr. Waterhouse, who talked for 3½ hours about how God is doing the Work and preparing the way for Christ's return through His chosen apostle.

Mr. Waterhouse saw Abraham "Bram" de Bree, director of God's Work in Dutch-speaking areas, before Mr. and Mrs. de Bree left for the Ministerial Refreshing Program here Jan. 6.

PASADENA — More than 2,400 readers of De Echte Waarheid (the Dutch Plain Truth) requested Dutch-language editions of Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong's book The Incredible Human Potential in December, according to Rod Matthews of the Work's International Office.

He reported that 1980 income for God's Work in the Netherlands increased 26 percent over 1979. Church attendance increased 7 percent, and membership is up 12 percent, he added.

PASADENA — Membership in Youth Opportunities United (YOU) is open to youths in God's Church ages 13 to 18, according to YOU director Kevin Dean.

All 12 year olds already in YOU as of April 1, 1981, may remain in the program. To provide a transition period, those who turn 12 should wait until they are 13 to become YOU members, he said.

Mr. Dean noted that YOU district boundaries are being changed to shorten driving distances between events. The new districts and 1981-82 district coordinators will be announced shortly, he said.

outline form into Quechua, and then discuss the material to fill in the details. The main problems facing the brethren there are keeping the Sabbath and the poverty of the country, Mr. Saenz said.

Some of the ministers have spoken or led songs in the Pasadena Spanish church while here for the refreshing program.

Mr. Walker expressed the deep gratitude that the Spanish ministers feel toward Mr. Armstrong in allowing them to participate in the program.

He said it will help the ministry to speak the same thing and to be of one mind. It will build greater unity and help them to sharpen their ministerial skills, he said.

attendance and a 10 percent increase in offerings.

Church attendance in the Caribbean grew steadily during the quarter, according to Ministerial Services personnel. Registered members in 1980 increased 12 percent. Other news from the Caribbean area is that operational expenses fell 2 percent during the July, August and September period.

Deacon robbed, blessed

PASADENA — "With a cocked revolver sticking you in the belly, physical things suddenly become meaningless," said Jim Roberts, an employee of the Work's Data Processing Center who was held up at gunpoint in late November.

"I was taking an evening walk when two guys who couldn't have been over 19 or 20 got out of a car pulled alongside the curb ahead of me. They asked if I had a cigarette. Then one of them pulled out a gun and asked if I had a wallet. But I didn't have it with me," he said.

Fearing for his life, Mr. Roberts said he was very cordial. "You don't want to irritate them any more than they already are," he noted. Only finding a watch and a small knife on their victim, the robbers instructed Mr. Roberts to start walking and not to look back.

Then on Jan. 3 Mr. Roberts and his wife Hazel discovered burglars had ransacked their home while they were at the Hollywood Palladium Church dance.

"Police say the robbers kicked in the door even though the dead bolt was in place," explained the Church employee.

Some of the stolen items included a stereo, radios, clocks, cameras, jewelry and flatware. "We don't have any insurance, but God is certainly providing for us," said Mr. Roberts. "We've been given a tape recorder, a stereo, money — so much. It's like Mr. [Herbert W.] Armstrong says, God can turn a lemon into lemonade."

Cardholders

Yes. We receive positive comments almost daily. We also appreciate the effort and long hours the members are putting in. Their efforts are producing excellent results in the newsstand program. With more readers of The Plain Truth, Mr. Herbert Armstrong has a larger audience in which to preach the Gospel.

INTERNATIONAL
MATTHEWS

PASADENA — Efforts were made in recent months to increase La Pura Verdad (Spanish Plain Truth) circulation in certain countries where little advertising has been done.

One area is Spain, with a population of 37 million. A few small ads were placed in the Valencia daily, Levante, and in Madrid's El Pais. These ads, combined with a gift-subscription offer mailed to La Pura Verdad subscribers, and a cardholder display program maintained by five Spanish members, will net approximately 2,500 new subscribers by the end of January. In just four months the Spanish mailing list will have tripled.

Since July nearly 5,000 new PV subscribers have been added at low cost as a result of a July card insert placed in subscriber issues where PV circulation was low.

The response was double what was expected and bolstered circulation in Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Venezuela and the Dominican Republic.

Philippine changes

In the final months of 1980, Mr. Adair conducted a number of Plain Truth lectures. The last one took place in Tacloban. It was the year's best, with 135 new people in attendance.

Most of the new people and 47 members stayed afterward for an open forum that lasted 1½ hours. Success of the lecture was partly due to a one-hour interview on the city's two radio stations. Mr. Adair was asked many questions about The Plain Truth, Ambassador College and Herbert W. Armstrong, by a panel of private and government reporters.

Tacloban became the 21st church in the Philippines and Mr. Adair ordained the area's first deacon.

Advertisements placed in Panorama magazine continue to do well. One entitled "Does God Exist?" drew a record response of 4,300.

The year ended with a financial increase of 30 percent over 1979.

Norwegian literature

Although there are no present plans for a Plain Truth in any of the Scandinavian languages, there has been a need for certain foundational booklets and the Correspondence Course. This is to help those who are not fluent in English, but who nevertheless understand enough to require additional "spiritual meat."

Several years ago a few booklets were translated into Danish, but after a thorough examination it was decided to translate titles into Norwegian, because that language is understood by a greater number of people in the nations involved.

Lessons 9, 10 and 11 of the Correspondence Course were printed in Norwegian, with lesson 12 in production.

Next year it is expected that lessons 1 through 8 will be translated, as well as the booklet Why Were You Born? Further booklet translations will follow.

Protection

God continues to intervene miraculously for His people all over the world. Cameroon elder Ray Clore reports on the incredible escape of a member's young daughter. She was run over by a car while her parents were working. The driver immediately took her to the hospital where it was found that she suffered no broken bones and only minor cuts. The incident was broadcast on the local radio station.

For the record

In the Jan. 12 year-end supplement we incorrectly identified Ambassador College faculty member Gary Antion as Wayne Antion. Our apologies to Mr. Antion.

30 Michigan brethren baptized

DETROIT, Mich. — After eight weeks of counselings by Detroit West ministers Jerold Aust and Maceo Hampton, 30 persons were baptized into God's Church Dec. 6.

"When I realized we had so many who desired baptism," said Mr. Aust, who has pastored the Detroit and Ann Arbor, Mich., churches for six months, "I looked into renting the swimming pool at Stout Junior High School, where we meet for services.

"I had instructed each individual to read and study the books and articles that Mr. [Herbert W.] Armstrong required, specifically The Wonderful World Tomorrow, What It Will Be Like and The Incredible Human Potential," he continued.

Some 400 persons were on hand to witness the baptisms. Many of them commented that the baptismal service helped them recommit their lives to God.

"It's true what Mr. Armstrong says — baptisms are up in the Church, because we have 10 or 15 more people already who want to be baptized," Mr. Aust remarked.
